DETAILED ACTION

Response to Amendment

Applicant's amendments, filed 4/17/03, have been considered and made of record.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-12 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over the services described in the article "One-Stop ASP Service for Small and Midsize Businesses Could be the End of Packaged Small Business Software" (April 17, 2000. New York) in view of official notice regarding e-commerce.

"One-stop" discloses a service, StageBuilder™ that allows businesses to select, over the Internet, from an extensive menu ("tags" stored in relation to a number of services) of enterprise software applications. The concept of renting applications over a network, also known as Application Service Providers (ASP) is widely known in the art [see articles labeled 2-7]. StageBuilder™ allows business administrators to turn on/off any particular application service (selecting another service when functional requirements are not met). Administrators have a StageBuilder™ offers a number of additional services including automated data exchange, ASP interoperability, caching and optimized service delivery (performing data format conversion between input by user and server-side applications).

“One-stop” does not explicitly disclose that the user can input function requirements in searching for a particular software application.

Official notice is taken that the ability to enter functionality criteria or demands in order to search for a particular item is well known in the art of electronic commerce. Such a capability is necessary to aid the end-user in finding the most appropriate product. In that StageBuilder™ offers a variety of services, it would have been obvious to allow the end-user to search these offerings by inputting his/her functional criteria, as taught by official notice, in order to make increase likelihood of a expedient purchase.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

The articles, "Soft wired" [2] "Online software catches on Firms connect with application services to save time" [3] "Providers put faith in Internet" [4] "Web-based software providers seek focus" [5] "ASP a low-cost, low-risk alternative to a client-server application" [6] and “ASPs are coming ASAP” [7] discuss the proliferation of ASPs generally. The articles do not explicitly disclose the delivery of ASPs from a central location or an end user’s ability to select from a plurality of services.
